Absence Barks Too Loud to Ignore

CAIO MIRANDA

Original title: A falta é um latido alto demais para ignorar

SYNOPSIS

"Scientist of Reality" is a poetic and contradictory plunge into the vastness of that which never definitively fills us. With a rhythm that graphically expands and contracts to reflect absence, the work investigates the void left by missed connections in love, the uncertainties of language, and the anxieties of the modern world, heavily shaped by the influence of screens, social media, and the capitalist system on our mental organization. Viewing poetry as a profound science of self-knowledge and perception of the other, the verses move in a dual motion of letting love go and chasing after its trace. Unafraid to be romantically profound or to explore the limits of the unsaid, the book demonstrates that naming one's own absences through the word is an act of human reinvention, proving to be a journey as perilous as the very act of feeling.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Caio Miranda is a poet, educator, and researcher. He was born and lives in the Zona Leste of São Paulo – SP. His poetry arises amidst the hardships of life and presents itself as a mosaic of different perspectives and ways for the body and the word to exist.
