SYNOPSIS

Apartments is a collection of short stories set within a single residential building, where its residents observe (or fail to observe) quarantine. It portrays the experience of setting oneself apart in a city like São Paulo, marked by the devastating historical moment of the coronavirus pandemic. Each sheet of paper acts as a window, while the words clear the mist from the glass and draw back the curtains, revealing the narrative and allowing the reader to savor that fleeting slice of life unfolding in each chapter.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Carolina Consorte was born in 2001 in the city of São Paulo. Since childhood, she has written short stories to read to friends and family. She is passionate about the sensible and everything concerning human depth and complexity.

She studied some psychology, which further contributed to her creative perception of daily life, a major source of inspiration for her writing. Today, she studies visual arts, writes, embroiders, cooks, tattoos, and sings to express her desire to create and transform realities.

Her writing brings to the forefront the voices of her characters as subjects with unique wills and desires. Each is their own narrator, experiencing their own conflicts and worlds, traversed by alterity and the coexistence with others.

Just as she does with her artwork, Carolina hopes her writing reaches deep layers and places within her readers—allowing them to laugh, weep, rage, and hope alongside her narratives. Her writings, put forth into the world this way, take on whatever shape the reader desires, like a living thing pulsing with possibilities.
