SYNOPSIS

This book is a collection of poems about not belonging to oneself. It is about fighting against this drowning in feelings that overflowed and then turned into words. Divided into three parts, the poems in this book reflect on how long it takes to discover how to survive on the open sea. Between drowning and learning to swim, one swallows a great deal of water. In the desperation of survival, one learns unimaginable things. I learned to write, and this book is also about that.
