SYNOPSIS

"Bramuras" by Hélverton Baiano is a short story collection that delights the reader through its language, lightness, and comedy, but also through the harshness of the situations faced by the characters, offering an imaginative, fast-pulsing tasting. Hélverton Baiano wrote "Bramuras" to sum up foolishness, idle with nothingness, swallow the ephemeral, wear fitting caps, and taste the puçás of childhood. All of this pulses in its imaginative tasting. Winner of the 2013 Hugo de Carvalho Ramos Publication Grant Award from the União Brasileira de Escritores – Seção de Goiás (UBE-GO), the book reflects the author's life journey since his childhood in Correntina (BA).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Hélverton Baiano was born in Correntina (BA) in March 1960, and Goiânia (GO) adopted him when he was 15 years old. A journalist deeply involved in literary circles, he has published 15 books, including História de Correntina, Algemas de Algodão (short stories), Paraíso Profano (poetry), Sapituca no Furdunço (short stories), Encanto Perverso (poetry), Falo de Amor a esses ouvidos moucos (poetry), and Expedição Abissal (novel). He has twice won the Hugo de Carvalho Ramos Publication Grant, Goiás's highest literary award, with books of prose and poetry, and has participated in dozens of regional and national anthologies. He is a member of the União Brasileira de Escritores – Goiás (UBE-GO).
