SYNOPSIS

In “Such an Empty White”, César Valença invites readers into a deep immersion within the mind of Vicente, a writer who finds himself trapped in his apartment after three sleepless days. Tormented by a relentless sun that seems to shine even at night, and by an unbearable heat, Vicente struggles to distinguish reality from his escalating hallucinations, which include “steel” cockroaches and rain falling only into the swimming pool. As he tries to cope with the absence of his traveling wife, Laura, who is not answering his calls, and the guilt over an extramarital affair, he spirals into memories and delusions, questioning the very nature of his perception and the sanity of his mind.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

César Valença was born in Natal, Rio Grande do Norte, in 1986. He holds a degree in Advertising. He works in design and illustration. He has played guitar, recorded albums. He draws, he paints. And now, he writes. “Such an Empty White” is his first book.
