SYNOPSIS

Cartas de Amor sem Correspondência is a collection of poetic writings that, freely and without regard for literary definitions and metrics, tells stories of love, heartbreak, grief, joy, connections, and missed connections. These reflections reveal the complexity of feelings contained within our individual dramas. Seemingly simple memories, their importance diluted by the banality of a routine imposed by the mechanical passage of time. When revisited and pieced together carefully and without haste, these memories reveal that they essentially made us who we are, serving as the forge that shaped us in every sense. An autobiographical journey written by an advertising executive accustomed to simple, direct, and accessible prose, it mirrors a bit of all our lives.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Born in Bauru, in the interior of the state of São Paulo, Alex Vendrametto Faulin is an award-winning advertising professional who, for more than thirty years, worked at some of the leading advertising agencies in Brazil and Portugal. Since 2012, he has been an independent consultant at his own firm. In 2018, while continuing to work remotely for clients in the city of São Paulo, he moved to the Serra Gaúcha in search of colder weather and a reconnection with simplicity and nature, where he has been organizing his writings, studying, and dedicating himself to developing his literary career.
