SYNOPSIS

The text presents a collection of short stories and poems that explore existential themes. The narratives are often charged with melancholy and introspection, revealing characters in conflict with themselves and the world around them. There is an emphasis on complex relationships and disillusionments, as well as reflections on the dictatorship and its impacts. The work delves into the depths of the human psyche, exposing vulnerabilities and questions about the nature of reality and the human condition. A strong philosophical and literary influence is observed, weaving a web of reflections on life, death, and art. The experimental and fragmented writing contributes to the atmosphere of uncertainty and ambiguity present throughout the stories.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Born in the city of Pelotas/RS, a writer for as long as she can remember, she produces newspaper articles, plays for developing actors, and poetry since 2017; a student of many things and trying to quit smoking.
