SYNOPSIS

After navigating turbulent seas and drowning in irreparable losses, sharp griefs, and thunderous violence wrought by patriarchal power, the author of the poems in WHAT MOVES ME returns to the mainland, anchoring on solid ground her desire to be a stronghold of love as she tears down the barriers imposed on what it means to be a woman. In the resilient soil of daily life, she seeks to reclaim the right to feel without allowing the waters of abuse, fear, and disillusionment to flood her inner self, which becomes a dwelling for hope at the end of this crossing.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

She lives in Salvador, Bahia. She holds a degree in Portuguese and English Language and Literature from the Universidade Federal da Bahia, where she is currently pursuing a master's degree in Literature and Culture, and teaches Portuguese in the private school system.

In 2020, she contributed to the anthology “Por essas linhas de cá” and participated in the Prêmio Ana Montenegro, both supported by the Lei Aldir Blanc.
