SYNOPSIS

Love, tentatively reflected across poems from different periods, forming a journey of (re)discovering the feminine and passion, illustrated by the sensibility of an artist friend. Or rather, an adventure of reclaiming, through poetry, a measure of lucidity and the ability to see within our own shadows while simultaneously gazing into the midday sun of surrendering to passion.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Lincoln de Barros was born in Belo Horizonte, Minas Gerais. He holds a degree in Philosophy and a master's in Public Administration. He worked for many years in information technology across both the public and private sectors, and for just as long as a social project analysis consultant for international economic and social development agencies. In his youth, he was a pharmacy clerk, taxi driver, car rental manager, and trade unionist, in addition to trying his hand at acting, among other experiences. Now retired, 76 years old, married, with two daughters and a son raised and out in the world, he currently serves as president of Fundação Grupo Esquel Brasil—dedicated to sustainable development alternatives—and as an advisor to CONFOCO (Conselho Nacional de Fomento e Colaboração) within the General Secretariat of the Presidency of the Republic.

And he writes.
