SYNOPSIS

Fresh starts, failures, and love. How many times, faced with a sharp pain, do we look within ourselves and think: This will be the last time. Convinced there is no strength left to keep trying to love the world and everything in it. Yet that never happens, because the spark dwelling within the heart keeps driving us forward. And suddenly, we are far from those sorrowful moments, which seemed endless, but never are. Because no pain ever is. It is never the final attempt; it is never the end of who we are. There is always another chance to keep searching for love.
