SYNOPSIS

In "Fogaréu Lilás", author Silvana Colombelli Parra Sanches invites readers to follow the journey of four characters who, in 2023, discover the possibility of time travel. Driven by the need to alter a dystopian future scarred by environmental catastrophes, they visit different eras and locations across Mato Grosso do Sul, experiencing historical events and confronting the social ills and struggles for justice that shaped the region's reality. Throughout their travels, the characters seek answers and ways to avert the imminent disaster, weaving a guiding thread between past, present, and future. The narrative explores humanity's complex relationship with nature, the construction of identities, and the quest for a fairer, more sustainable future, culminating in a plot filled with adventure, social critique, and reflections on the destiny of humankind.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

PhD in Education and social scientist, professor at the Instituto Federal de Mato Grosso do Sul, Nova Andradina campus. Mother to Eduardo, born in Mato Grosso do Sul, daughter of a gaúcha and a descendant of Paraguayans, sister to five, aunt to many, curious about the future, a dreamer and an optimist. From her parents, both history teachers, she inherited a taste for social critique. This is her second book, her first work of fiction. Since childhood, the acts of reading and writing have stimulated and channeled her creativity. She hopes her writings nurture heirs of good ideas.
