SYNOPSIS

While a couple goes through a separation, the country divorces itself from its social, political, and cultural achievements.

In Title Page, this mirror is cracked by a voice speaking in a stream of consciousness, where the poetic persona becomes lost between personal fulfillment and collective duty, interrupted by the opponent. Or lover.

Reflection or mirror, duet or duel, the rupture becomes necessary. But poetry acts as a guide in the investigation of where one's own identity lies, as well as that of the place where one lives.
