SYNOPSIS

This is a collective story of Black and Indigenous peoples set against the backdrop of incarcerated lives, mirroring both historical and contemporary experiences, where racism, LGBTphobia, and religious intolerance are debated and confronted, while also celebrating our ancestry. The plot takes place within and around the orbit of the Penitenciária Lemos de Brito, in the state of Bahia, where freedom is the longing of every character, whether directly or indirectly imprisoned. Orbiting this place, each character stands as a counterpoint in the struggle for justice and the reclamation of ancestry by Black women and men who experience the racism of incarceration in Brazil as a byproduct of structural racism.
