SYNOPSIS

Far-from-harmless knitters, an office lunch thief, an astronaut studying a black hole, a trapeze artist afraid of heights, a father and son living humanity's last day. These are just a few of the characters who inhabit The Museum of Minor Character Flaws, featuring fifteen stories, part ordinary and part extraordinary, that address our shared humanity with humor and irony.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Bia holds a degree in economics and is a researcher and writer, because the soul cannot live by numbers alone. A specialist in internet culture and trends, she likes to write to make sense of the world. She returned to fiction writing more seriously in 2021, publishing a short story alongside nine other authors in the book Dez Estações; she was also a finalist in the chronicle category of the Off Flip Prize in 2021 and a semifinalist in the Pena de Ouro Short Story Prize, organized by Casa Brasileira de Livros, in 2022. Her fiction dances among people, slightly absurd ideas, and strange situations, driven by her belief that life imitates art (and vice versa).
