SYNOPSIS

Luluca is like this: if she wakes up with her spirits in the sky, she dresses herself in somersaults, cartwheels, and cotton-candy clouds. If she is feeling calm, she soon curls up in her tree dress, and from there her thoughts take flight like little birds.

The truth is, Luluca has an endless color wardrobe of emotions!

And what about you, do you like dressing up like that too?

Then come join this playful story and create a special outfit for Luluca using the colors of your imagination!

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

I was born in Belém do Pará in 1971 and spent my childhood in Macapá, Amapá—the city in the middle of the world. The rain, the mangoes, and the Amazon River were and still are my eternal playthings. Later, I returned to my hometown, where I studied History and Law, but writing for children is what best defines my (re)creation.
