SYNOPSIS

"Where Tangará Lies" brings together 50 poems, organized into three parts, that lead readers to confront the "strange mask, truer than the face itself," of which Quintana speaks. A mask sculpted from the clay of life, where passions, emotions, habits, dreams, places, reminiscences, images, enchantments, and astonishments have framed the soul of an itinerant poetic persona—still a novice, yet already aware of the effects that an intense cadence of arrivals and departures can provoke within a person.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Daniel Valente was born in 1995; he is a poet and a student of Literature at Universidade Potiguar. He discovered literature as a child, after coming across a poetry book at the Municipal Library of the town of Tangará – RN. He has published his work in literary magazines and anthologies in Brazil and abroad. And ever since that encounter with the book in the library, he has developed an intensive focus on poetry recitation, almost as a personal commitment to orality.
