SYNOPSIS

On every street and on every corner of Malacacheta, the author presents us with a story, allowing us to immerse ourselves in her world filled with curious characters. There is a blend of voices and perspectives that, throughout the reading, gradually forms a panoramic view of the author's life, the history of Malacacheta, the Vale do Mucuri, and Minas Gerais, as well as the human condition itself. Thus, those who read the texts feel as though they were paving the city streets with stones, one by one, laying foundations for memories and unearthing discoveries about life. Everything blends together: we no longer know what is regional history, real-life events, invention, and literary devices.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Born on September 22, 1993, in Malacacheta, Minas Gerais. She has lived in São Paulo/Capital since 2010. She has published texts in several anthologies and cites writers Conceição Evaristo and Octavia E. Butler as literary influences. Following in the footsteps of these writers, she believes that what she wishes to read and has not been written, it is her duty to write.
