SYNOPSIS

In Pequeno Baco Doente, we are invited to explore the internal and external confrontations that accompany us on the journey through existence. Through conscious perception, the threads that weave this work seek to align with an intentionality that intertwines past and future, while remaining rooted in our surroundings. The themes revolve around reflections on time and the transience of life, an engagement with the human condition, love, and a concern with the very fabric of poetry. Memory temporalizes and synthesizes thoughts born from the present experience of being in the world.
