SYNOPSIS

The book offers humanistic perspectives and senses, presenting a socially critical poetry that pours forth in defense of all that is vulnerable. In caring for the pain of others, Gisela also weeps for the Earth's suffering and pours out verses in resilient revolution. The work holds prints of memory, filling poems with the possibilities of flight from the perspective of rising up. The words are drawn by a cathartic, metaphorical blue thread that "paints" the book to achieve representation for beings diverse in their essences, where the author also finds a clearing for herself.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Gisela Maria Bester is a gaúcha born and raised in the heart of the Érico Veríssimo region, of the indigenous peoples of the missions, bordering Argentina, with the Parque Estadual do Turvo and Salto do Yucumã as dividers of waters, forests, and minds. A Sagittarian with an ascendant in humanism, she is passionate about people, animals, and everything in nature. She is a writer who cares about the pain of others. Based in Curitiba since 1998, she divides her time between the South and the North (Tocantins, also her home). She previously lived in Florianópolis, Barcelona, Madrid, Rome, Perugia, Paris, and Lisbon, always for academic pursuits. She is a copyeditor and translator. Holding a Bachelor's, Master's, Ph.D., and Post-Doctorate in Law, a field in which she taught in higher education and wrote for nearly thirty years, she has authored numerous scientific and educational publications (individual and collective books, articles, prefaces, afterwords, and reviews) with national and international reach. She has edited academic journals and sits on the editorial boards of periodicals in Brazil and abroad. A lawyer, she served as General Director of the Escola Superior de Advocacia do Estado do Tocantins (ESA-TO), Advisory Counselor to the National Commission for Constitutional Studies of the Federal Council of the Brazilian Bar Association, and worked in the Ministries of Justice and Education. Winner of the 8th Ethos Institute-Valor Econômico National Sustainability Award in 2008 (1st place, Professors Category). Upon retiring as a university professor
