SYNOPSIS

Douglas is 18 years old and seems to carry the drama of an entire fan club on his own. An online micro-celebrity, he spends his days sliding into the DMs of his favorite pop divas. Each chapter is built around the imaginary conversations he has with them about his anxieties. College entrance exams, losing his virginity, home renovations, family, heartbreak: everything feels impossible to handle. "Please Come to Brazil" is a tracklist of hyperconnected adolescence, a sensitive and often humorous account of how digital life blurs with reality, showing that becoming an adult has never been so complicated.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Braulio Lorentz is a music journalist (g1, Billboard, Folha, JB), a member of the Latin Grammy Academy, and a pop diva enthusiast. He had his name teased by Pabllo, "crashed" Anitta's dressing room in Lisbon, got shut down by Avril Lavigne, and taught Fergie how to say "bunda." Alanis Morissette gave him meditation tips, Demi Lovato thanked him for attending her shows in São Paulo, Dua Lipa shared tricks to get over an ex, and Miley Cyrus agreed with him that cell phones can ruin the concert experience.
