SYNOPSIS

What cannot fit in the chest overflows, spills beyond the body, and becomes writing. This book is an attempt to capture the heartbeats and pauses of women who survive at the end of the day. It is the exposure of scars, but also a possibility of regeneration through art. The text as a possibility of listening to the solitude that settles into the spaces of our days, an acceptance of weakness before life, and a recognition of the weight of being ourselves—free.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Born in Feira de Santana-BA, Fernanda Santos holds a Master's degree in Literary Studies from the Universidade Estadual de Feira de Santana (UEFS). She also earned a degree in Letras Vernáculas from UEFS and teaches Portuguese in the municipal school system of Feira de Santana. A Black woman from the urban periphery, she found in poetry, from an early age, a space to unveil her silences. At 25, she publishes her debut poetry collection, "Preciso pôr ordem onde não há ordem".
