SYNOPSIS

The book "When I Become a Person" delves into the core of the human experience, navigating the twists and turns of life's struggles. Within the pages of this book, the reader will find the pain and passion of family life, the yearning for a better future, and the profound questions of self-discovery—what it means to become someone. These verses are born from the raw emotions we all experience: the ache of loneliness, the tenacity of hope, and the constant effort to forge our own path. There are also landscapes of bittersweet memories, where dreams take flight, painted in vibrant imagery that encourages the reader to reach for a life that transcends the ordinary. Yet this journey is not solely about the destination; it is about the exploration itself. The reader will encounter poems that address the very essence of who we are, the decisions we make before our twenties, and the experiences that shape us, turning into mirrors that reflect our vulnerabilities and aspirations. This collection of poems is an invitation to embark on a shared exploration. Readers are invited to let the words paint a canvas of emotions, awakening their own introspections and inspiring them to pursue their dreams. As they turn the pages, they are reminded that they are not alone in navigating life's beautiful chaos. Here, the reader will find a companion in verse, a voice that resonates with the longing for growth, connection, and the unwavering pursuit of self-discovery.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Luciana Pontes is a Brazilian artist whose work spans writing, performance, photography, and acting. Her artistic practice focuses on themes related to trauma and memory, which ebb and flow in fleeting moments and expressions within her poetics. Her work engages with the duality of life, connecting contemporary social issues with the quest for complete freedom through the contemplation of small things and the saturation of details.
