SYNOPSIS

Charting poetic writing as a way of relating to the world and its challenges while feeling guided and summoned at every moment by a constant, energizing presence. Thus unfolds a collection of poems in which the author pours himself into moments of prayer and contrition, not seeking answers, but presenting his laments and distresses frankly and openly. There is an invitation to realize that poetry becomes a place of connection and encounter, of resistance and meaning. "I Want to Make This Poem a Prayer" is a deep, introspective journey, exploring the complexities of human existence through verses charged with emotional honesty and lyricism.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Deivis Macedo is married to Elaine and is the father of Alice and João. A theologian, poet, Baptist pastor, and writer. A lover of life and a student of living. He holds degrees in pharmacy and theology and is currently pursuing a master's degree in Systematic-Pastoral Theology at PUC-RJ.
