SYNOPSIS

In this book, through the course of these poems, the act of "glimpsing" traverses different spaces, migrating from Minas, a territory of harsh poetic profusion, to the coast and its fluidity. Along this journey of departure and return, each gaze incorporates the elements of the landscape, absorbing in an undulating inner-outer flow all the objects revealed to then amplify them, like rock piercing the tense surface of the sea.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Aloisio Romanelli was born in 1993 in Belo Horizonte, Minas Gerais, where he currently lives. A graduate in Medicine from the Universidade Federal de Minas Gerais, he now works as a psychiatrist. He has maintained a close relationship with poetry since childhood, and Relances de mar e montanha is his first poetry collection.
