SYNOPSIS

The book “Toda Poesia tem seu fim” [All Poetry Must End] is a singular and unusual work, presenting a premise that arouses curiosity and urges the reader to plunge into the depths of the poetic universe. The author, a poet of a sensitive and restless soul, made a surprising decision: to no longer write poetry. And it is through this collection of his poetic works that he presents his choice to us.

The book gathers all the poetry published by Leonardo Triandopolis Vieira across his books:

O Vermelho dos seus castanhos;

Orgasmografia;

Pedaços Humanos;

Trabalho de Luto;

Obscenográfica;

Topografia Bacanal | Obscenus;

Panjabuticaba;

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Leonardo Triandopolis Vieira seeks in the written word a para-abstract, achromatic symbol that operates not merely as a tool to objectify his subjectivities, but also as a monad for insurgent artistic creation. Through appropriation, reframing, and the indiscriminate manipulation of the word within its collective body (the text). A continuous rehearsal, a state of strike, disruptive in its awareness of an insubmissive feeling. Art ablaze, given that creation devours everything around it. The word is fire, and those who operate it are nothing more than dry branches.
