SYNOPSIS

At seventeen, on the verge of entering university, João is lost and uncertain of what the future holds. Facing financial hardship, his mother's separation, and life in the suburbs, he manages to pass a public service exam and moves to the countryside. An idealist, João wants to work toward the common good, but encounters numerous obstacles along the way. Meanwhile, Amana, a bright young woman, experiences a tragic accident on the river that runs through her town. Yet, this incident causes her path to cross with João's, and together they believe they can change the world. Two young people caught in the sinister plot of public and social life.
